

nothing was working we were going to miss 1.5 degrees (the youth must have let us down) what else could they do they looked for something like a billionaire bunker that didn't have cops who would kill a place that contained something valuable something rare at the beginning they threw food. Throwing food is what you do in high school it is a gesture against death a sacrifice to the gods, people were shocked look at this destruction so they threw oil as the disasters go on they will not stop what will they throw next
