Part 4: nonprofit industrial

Getty's money bought art, made oil, made a museum, put oil in the air and denial in the air, some of it cost the golden hippie his ear like Van Gogh, some became Trust and a home for Trust that was supposed to stand for the ages. A watcher had the good taste to try to steal some but there was appointed an outside monitor another watcher. Now it thrives.

What does the money do as it spins immortal and regarded? Some of it comes back, some comes back and helps people throw food at art. A small fraction not to be missed.
