

Poem for unrealized love

As years advance the mind remembers more those times and people who once formed a core Of what has been your rich and varied life
The one you had before your present strife.

There was that certain love that couldn't wait a yearning love you knew to never date
A love that you Were forced to hide.
Strong feeling(s) you had harbored now buried deep inside

That face forever etched within your youthful mind Anxiety uncertainty caused such a heartfelt bind.
So many years have passed since then But you can clearly remember when shared looks or words caused teenaged cheeks to blush It was real feeling; more than a short lived childhood crush.

Oh our lives have marched so far beyond that past When coy and modest glances were seen last Truth be told, there never was a love
The two of you ignored;
by Cupid's trusty dove.

As years advance the mind remembers more of times and people who once formed a core Of what constitutes one rich and varied life
The life you had before your present strife.
There was one certain love that couldn't wait a yearning love you knew to never date A love that you had learned to hide Strong feeling(s) slowly buried deep inside a face forever burned in ones' youthful mind Anxiety and immaturity left you in a heartfelt bind
So many years have passed since then But you can clearly remember when It was real feeling, much more than just a crush shared looks or words caused teenaged cheeks to blush Oh our lives have marched so far beyond that past When coy and modest glances were seen last Truth be told their never was a love
The two of you ignored by Cupid's dove